

Step inside 'A Lost Paradise?'

In 2017, artist filmmaker Benjamin Wigley began a two year project entitled 'A Lost Paradise?' to explore and interpret the landscape at Shugborough - both existing and lost. In 1795 a great flood washed away a number of monuments and changed the designed landscape forever. Through poetry, film and soundscapes, Ben has recreated that tumultuous night and showcased his films within three specially designed Kinetoscopes. Using renewable energy in the form of handcranks, the kinetoscopes allow the films to be viewed and heard in the very landscape they were filmed in and inspired by without the need for damage to, or a permanent intervention within it. A 'making of' video and further information can be found in the Parkland Exhibition room at Park Farm.

Look for the kinetoscopes when you're exploring the landscape.

Key

-  Property ownership boundary
-  Railway
-  Forested areas
-  Areas of water
-  Parkland with restricted access
-  Dog Bins
-  Kinetoscope

Recommended rambles

-  Monuments Stroll
-  Hadrian's Arch Walk
-  Stafford Plantation Walk
-  Essex Bridge and Great Haywood Cliffs

Stop off points

- 1 Car park and Visitor Reception
- 2 Explorers' Wood
- 3 Tower of the Winds
- 4 Doric Temple
- 5 Shepherd's Monument
- 6 Cat's Monument
- 7 Chinese House
- 8 Essex Bridge
- 9 Great Haywood
- 10 Great Haywood Cliffs
- 11 Quarry
- 12 The Ruin
- 13 Boat House
- 14 Lantorn of Demosthenes
- 15 Hadrian's Arch
- 16 Milford

Exploring the parkland safely

- Please keep your dog on a lead at all times in the parkland. The Stafford Plantation is a great place for under-control dogs to let off a bit of steam off the lead. Please ensure you pick up after your dog, dog bins can be found across the estate and marked on the map.
- Surrounded by rivers and a canal, Shugborough has lots of open water, so please keep a close eye on children and dogs.
- Our plants may look tasty, but we recommend that you don't eat any of the leaves or berries at Shugborough.
- We recommend suitable footwear be worn when heading out into the parkland. Check with our team about suitability of paths and routes if you have any accessibility concerns.
- If you touch any of our farm animals, please ensure you wash your hands before eating.

* We recommend OS Maps beyond this area